

Dictation Extensions (Ron Yoshimoto, 2009)

Dictation is an excellent way to reinforce student's knowledge and application of phonograms, phonetic generalizations, learned words, syllabication patterns, and morphology. But the teacher can also integrate vocabulary, grammar, sentence structure, writing mechanics (capitalization, punctuation), creative writing, paragraphing skills, and content learning with this exercise. Teacher dictates sentences (students self-correct via COPS with teacher providing assistance after COPS is completed). After all sentences have been corrected, the teacher provides extensions:

- 1) Ask students to underline the subject once and underline the predicate twice
- 2) Students underline or circle the nouns, verbs, adjectives, etc. in sentence
- 3) Students will draw an arrow from the adjective to the noun it modifies
- 4) Ask students to place parenthesis around the prepositional phrase that tells where, where, etc.
- 5) Students find synonyms or antonyms for select words
- 6) With one of the sentence, have the students write a sentence that would come before the dictated sentence and a sentence that would come after the dictated sentence.
- 7) Using one of the sentences, the students write a paragraph.
- 8) Students may diagram the sentences
- 9) Dictate the subject; student writes and comes up with the predicate
- 10) Dictate the predicate; student writes the subject.
- 11) May create sentences that reinforce content learning – science, social studies, etc.
- 12) Teacher asks comprehension questions for each sentence.

Paragraph Dictation

When students are ready, teacher creates paragraphs to dictate to students. These paragraphs will reinforce spelling rules, sounds, grammar, sentence structures, syllabication patterns and morphological elements that have been taught. Additionally, like sentence dictation, these paragraphs are models for the students – descriptive, sequence, cause/effect, etc. The paragraphs can be extended in the following ways:

- 1) Students underline the topic sentence and highlight the supporting sentences
- 2) Students answer comprehension questions
- 3) Teacher can reinforce signal words
- 4) Teacher can dictate a paragraph and students find a sentence that does not belong
- 5) Teacher dictate sentences and students arrange the sentences to form a paragraph
- 6) Students write a paragraph that comes before and after the dictated paragraph.

Dictation and COPS

Procedures for Dictation: Explain to students that the teacher will dictate two to four sentences. They will repeat and write. Prior to dictation, teacher discusses applicable punctuation and capitalization rules that they have learned (which will be used in the sentences). Discuss the new phonogram, learned word(s), rule or syllabication pattern that will also be used in the sentences. The teacher then discusses strategies that students may use: 1) for learned words, look at word wall or on the student sheet; 2) for phonetic words, use fingerspelling; and 3) check memory banks for applicable rules.

Teacher says sentence; students repeats and writes; students read the sentence they spelled. If the sentence is long, say the sentence and students repeat. The teacher then breaks up the sentence. Say first part, students repeat and write. Teacher says second part, students repeat and write. Students read the sentence they wrote.

COPS with Dictation: After students write each sentence (and after they read the sentence they wrote), students will self-correct via COPS. They will read their sentence four times:

- 1) Check for capitalization when reading the sentence for the first time
- 2) Read the sentence for the second time and check for organization – sentence structure, number of words, syntax, etc.
- 3) Read the sentence for a third time and check for punctuation
- 4) Read the sentence for the fourth time and check for spelling.

Teacher should model COPS. Put the first sentence on the board and demonstrate the steps for COPS.

An adaptation: After the students have finished writing a sentence, have them draw a picture relating to the picture. This will give the teacher time to check the work of each student.
